Saga of the Wolf: "This Above All: To Thine Own Self Be True" A. Jeffers, J. Gasparin
Catalina Bast, a bright young woman with special gifts, has a chance meeting with a loup-garu that forever changes her life. Sensing the man within the wolf, she helps him escape trouble; only to find a link to him neither can explain.

Romulus MacBain, a mysterious man with a dark history, is a member of a clan of hereditary werewolves, a species of people who have lived in reclusive obscurity for hundreds of years. As he parts ways with Cat, he feels as if he is letting go of something vital.

It isn’t until years later, when a young female member of his family goes missing, that Rom chances to meet her again. Now a Chicago policewoman, Cat is on the same trail, searching for a criminal known to traffic in human flesh.

She helps to save Rom’s little cousin. In return, he saves Cat'slife. When she is near death from a gunshot wound, he sets himself as her personal bodyguard, vowing to protect her from the criminal who would see her dead.

This, the first book in the series, Saga of the Wolf, To Thine Own Self be True, takes you on a wild ride of adventure, terror, and the exploration of long-hidden secrets in the lives of Catalina Bast and Romulus MacBain.
