Standing Stones Beth Camp
During the Industrial Revolution, great fortunes were made that transformed the lives of rich and poor alike. In 1842, Lord Gordon claims Westness, his island estate in northern Scotland. Fisherman Mac McDonnell, suspicious of Lord Gordon from the beginning, speaks out against the coming changes -- despite the impact his actions will have on his sister and three brothers.

But when evictions begin, and a second protest at Westness turns violent. Mac is unwilling to back down. He must decide what he is willing to risk -- to protect his family, his sweetheart, and his livelihood.

BETH CAMP writes historical fiction. Standing Stones is the first of three books that follow the McDonnell clan in Scotland, Australia, and Canada.

PRAISE FOR STANDING STONES:
“Well-developed characters and well-researched background & history made this an excellent book that I found hard to put down. I felt as if I was a friend of the McDonnell family, living on the island and sharing their love and hardships.”
“Camp’s characters step off the page in this finely detailed recreation of time and place.”
“I strongly recommend this book to any one that enjoys Scotland and family sagas.”
“This history should not be forgotten. The author’s writing style is exquisite, and her attention to detail is superb. If you are a history buff, you will enjoy reading this book.”

Set in the Orkney Islands during the time of the Clearances, Standing Stones won an award for historical fiction from the Pacific Northwest Writers Association and was called “a very promising work, with appeal to a broad audience, peppered with a variety of characters the reader can identify with sympathetically or instantly distrust.”
