TASK FORCE BLACK (5) IN HARM'S WAY Timothy Conan
After a series of terrorist attacks on European cities, people grew weary of the constant and pervasive threat of repeated atrocities. When and where would the Jihadists strike again? The mastermind behind the carnage was enormously wealthy and uncannily deceptive, evading a British and American operation that had narrowly failed to eliminate him. It seemed that he was destined to evade justice, something the West could ill afford - another Osama bin Laden saga that might drag on for years. Eventually, a signal was intercepted and a five member Black Ops unit traced the world's most wanted terrorist to Turkey only to find that before they planned their move, they would have to be seen to have perished in a tragic accident. As the battle of wills played out in Turkey, a group of jihadists arrived separately at various British ports. All was not what it seemed and the outcome, if successful would be devastating. It was the last throw of the dice for Britain's Cobra crisis committee whose strike team would be disavowed if killed or captured on foreign soil.
