Annapurna, First Conquest of an 8000-Meter Peak (26, 493 Feet) Maurice Herzog
Judd's review Feb 23, 12 5 of 5 stars bookshelves: all-time-favorites Read in August, 2011 I love mountaineering and this is the king of mountaineering books. The story of the first 8000 meter mountain to be climbed. The first to be climbed on the first try. Yet, Annapurna still remains the most difficult mountain on Earth to climb. Maurice Herzog's team of French mountaineers suffered greatly for claiming Annapurna's summit, but in the end all I could say is, "They just don't build men like they used to." This crew of post-colonialism adventurers bit off more than they could handled, but still managed to swallow while choking. A must read for anyone even if you have no interest in mountaineering.
